Relevant information helps your department to perform

Award-winning journals from Elsevier cover a broad range of disciplines relevant to the work you do. Whether your focus is business and management, psychology, nursing, biochemistry or any other field in the sciences and social sciences, there'll be an Elsevier journal right for you.

Access to high-quality, peer-reviewed information is proven to drive your learning and research success. It's important to be able to base your decisions on the latest knowledge and analysis.

Your institution's reputation can be enhanced

The quantity, and the quality, of your department's output are likely to be enhanced when you have easy access to the top journals. You can ensure you're investigating new areas and more easily identify opportunities and trends. Better quality output can support a compelling case for a bigger budget and increase your institution's prestige within the market.

Online access is fast and easy

Getting your hands on a copy of the article you need can be tough and time consuming. Requesting an interlibrary loan, tracking down a hard copy or feeding the copier takes time that you could spend elsewhere. Online access is immediate and easy and it can complement your print subscriptions.

Choose from a range of 1,300 top Elsevier journals available online via the world-class platform, ScienceDirect®. Select the core journals you want, and share individual password access with up to five of your staff and colleagues, even if they work remotely.

You can search all the abstracts on ScienceDirect as well as the full-text articles in journals to which you subscribe. From the results list, you can view, download and
